Finding Hope After Suffering

Light Beyond The Cross

Upon the hill, the cross stood tall,
Shadows stretched, and darkness called.
Nails and thorns, a world in pain,
Yet even there, His love remained.
The sky grew dark, the earth did quake,
A broken world, a soul to wake.

In every tear, in every cry,
The promise whispered: death shall die.
But beyond the cross, a light appears,
Shining through our doubts and fears.
The stone rolled back, the morning new,
A victory carved in crimson hue.

Suffering fades, though scars remain,
They teach us strength through every strain.

The light beyond, forever near,
Dispels the night, dissolves the fear.
So in our trials, we may see
A greater love, a destiny.
The cross was heavy, yet it bore
A light that shines forevermore.
